

Attrition Rates

The East Midlands has a strong and diverse university sector, consisting of 9 universities (including The Open University in the East Midlands) and one University college.

Percentage of full-time first degree entrants (entry 2007/8) no longer in HE in 2008/9

This bar chart shows the percentage of students that drop out of universities in the East Midlands, by their second year.

Each university has a benchmark which is set by HEFCE (shown in red). These benchmarks take into account subject and entry qualifications for specific HEIs, they are not targets. All universities in the East Midlands perform better than their benchmarks.

Nationally 8.7% of full-time first degree entrants dropped out, compared to only 6.9% from the regions HEIs

About EMUA

EMUA (the East Midlands Universities Association) provides a forum for all the universities and higher education institutions in the East Midlands to work together, and acts as their collective voice in the region.
